Science Fiction/ Young Adults / Adventure Ballad of Songbirds and Snakes If We Burn, You BURN with the US! Katniss, President Coriolanus Snow Mockingjay is the third and final novel in the Hunger Games trilogy by Suzanne Collins. It was released on August 24, 2010. Summary Struggle can't be avoided. Damage cannot be contained. The revolution is here. Katniss Everdeen survived the Hunger Games twice. Now a revolution is unfolding, of which it has been a part for a long time, without even knowing it. District 13 has come out of the shadows and is plotting to topple the Capitol. The success of the uprising depends on Katniss' willingness to be a pawn, to take responsibility for countless lives, and to change the course of Panem's future. To do this, she must put aside her feelings of anger and distrust. It should become a Mockingjay rebel - no matter what personal expenses. This is the latest book in Suzanne Collins' worldwide bestseller trilogy The Hunger Games. The plot this section needs to be cleaned and improved. You can help The Hunger Games wiki by editing it. Part I: Ashes Katniss to take stock of his new position as a rebel in district 13. Only three winners were rescued from the arena: Beetee (previous tribute from District 3, who was one of the allies of Katniss), Finnick (a handsome winner from District 4 and the first ally of Katniss) and Katniss herself, but Pete Mellark, along with the other winners of TheObaria (a women's tribute from District 2), Joanna Mason (a tribute from District 7), and Annie Cross (who was not in the Kell quarter but was arrested when the arena exploded) were captured and taken to the Capitol. Katniss is still chasing Snow and fears for Pita's life. The book begins with Katniss in Area 12, which has been reduced to ashes. Only Katniss wanted to see the area herself. While she's there, she picks up Buttercup (Prima's cat), her father's old hunting jacket, her mother's wedding photo, and a book of plants. Before leaving, she notices one of Snow's white roses on the dresser. The hovercraft will take it to Area 13, where survivors in area 12 are currently living. When she returns, she watches an interview between Caesar and Pete. She is relieved when she believes that Pete looks unscathed, healthy even, but during the interview, Pete calls for a cease-fire and is accused by many people of betrayal. That's why later, when she decides to become Mockingjay, she asks for Pete's immunity and other tributes, as well as hunting rights for her and Gail, right to keep Buttercup for Prim, and permission to kill Snow. President Coin, leader of District 13, agrees to these terms and Katniss officially becomes Mockingjay. Katniss is to be featured in a commercial for the rebel side, proposal (short-cut propaganda). For one propa, she and a team that includes her old friend Gail are sent to Area 8, where they see the hospital get destroyed. This inspires Katniss to call for justice. During the broadcast of an interview with Pete at the Capitol, Beetee can gain control of the broadcast and broadcast the offer for a short time before the battle for control of the broadcast breaks out. While back and forth, Pete manages to send a coded message to the rebels, warning them of an attack. The Capitol then bursts into chaos, the camera leans to the floor, screams can be heard and Pete's blood squirts the ground. Part II: Pete Mellark's attack warns Katniss of the impending explosion of District 13, after briefly serving tracker jacker poison, leading to his torture. He does so during an interview with Caesar Flickerman when asked what he wants to say to Katniss. Sounds a shrill alarm to evacuate the upper floors into the bunkers. Since Katniss is seen by the people as a symbol of rebellion, she composes herself and was one of the first to reach the bunkers, having come to the fact that her mother and Prim still moved the patients of the hospital. While she waits, alarmed by blood stains on the sign of the bunker, she grabs three packs of instructions. Over time, her mother comes, and they are wary of why Prim has not yet arrived. She imagines herself Prim, and suddenly understands the situation. Prim, being herself, rushed back to her compartment to get her favorite cat, Buttercup. After a big panic, Prim, along with Gail, returns to safety with Buttercup. Everyone waits in the bunker for a few days until the bombardment stops. Katniss learns during the explosion that the Capitol is using Pete, and every time she says something against them, they hurt him. When she looks above the ground at all the wreckage after the explosion, she sees President Snow planted more roses. Katniss starts crying when her film crew tells her to say a short line for the camera to show that she is alive and still struggling. Finnick explains to the baffled film crew that Katniss knows the Capitol will hurt Pete if she can be put into a fight at the Capitol. Plutarch reminds Katniss that all districts must first unite with the uprising, and only District 2 remained, and allows Katniss to go there. Rebels fly to Area 2 to take control of Walnut, a huge mountain containing the main military facility of the Capitol. Commander Lyme agrees to help the rebels in the plan, and they discuss how to take over the mountain. Gail assumes that they use special bombs that he and Beetee are designed to blow up the nut. Katniss is shocked by Gayle's ruthlessness, as he doesn't care if innocent civilians or workers are killed. The rebels decide to take a chance and blow up the mountain; the plan is working and the survivors are sacrificing themselves so that others can escape. Castor and houses are also killed by lizard mongrels. The squad makes it to the surface, but Katniss sees Finnick get beheaded by a lizard mongrel. Katniss uses holo as explosives NIGHTLOCK! Three times, activating your self-destruct system. She throws a holo down the drain, killing the mongrel, but destroying the holo. The squad is shocked by the many deaths from the team as they are only Katniss, Pete, Gayle, Cressida and Pollux are alive. The squad continues to climb further and further to the surface until they reach the apartment where they are sheltering. Once inside, they find the woman, but before she can warn any Capitol forces, Katniss kills her. Now, in the heart of the Capitol, they need to hide until the rebels find their way. As they navigate the streets of the Capitol, they find themselves right in the heart of Capitol Street and are at risk of being seen. Cressida takes them to a store owned by her old friend Tiger. She agrees to keep them safe and feed them. The team manages to stay in the basement of the Tiger store, where they stay for a couple of days and watch the rebel advance. The Capitol and the rebels are currently engaged in a full-scale war. One night while everyone is asleep, Katniss and Gail talking about her, in which Gail says that Katniss will choose, without whom she believes she can not live. It upsets her, but keeps it to herself. The next morning, Tiger heads to try to gather information. Tiger returns in the evening with meat and chips for the squad, and informs them that the citizens of the Capitol have been pushed into the streets while the war continues. She then shows them a television broadcast in which President Snow announces that he is opening a mansion for all Capitol refugees. Katniss understands that they should use the flow of refugees in the center of the Capitol. At first, others are wary of the plan, but they decide to go ahead with it. The team plans its course of action over the next day and night. In anticipation, Capitol citizens are heading further into the city. With the help of Tiger, Katniss, Pete, Gail, Cressida and Pollux dress up in Capitol clothing to blend in with the crowd. They thank Tiger for help, leave the store and take to the streets. They become separated in the process, leaving Gayle and Katniss together, but the riot ensues and the rebels begin to attack the two, causing the Capitol to fight back. Countless civilians are killed in the crossfire, and Katniss witnesses a young girl being shot. Gail and Katniss know that they must keep moving, otherwise they will be killed or identified, so they keep moving, running through the streets, avoiding shooting. Gail manages to get a gun from the peacemaker, and Katniss keeps her bow hidden under her coat. They see a pod activate that sends a purple beam of light down the street, causing everyone caught in it to bleed to death from each hole. Another pod is activated, causing another street to split in the middle into a slit below. Many people, both civilian and fighter jets, fall into the pit, and and Gail's separated. He almost runs away, runs away, he is captured by peacekeepers and orders Katniss to shoot him, but she cannot bring herself to do so. As Katniss runs further into the Capitol to find and kill President Snow, she finds herself pushing alone to Snow's mansion, which was supposedly open to the Capitol children's shelter (but is actually designed to provide a human shield for snow). A huge crowd of young children huddle behind the barricade as Katniss watches on a hovercraft with a Capitol seal drop dozens of parachutes down on children containing medical supplies such as food and water. When children collect parachutes, bombs placed in supply bags explode and kill many of them. As Katniss and the crowd look in horror, rebel medics arrive and begin to break through the barricade to help the children. Katniss then notices his sister Prim in the crowd of children helping. She rushes to the barricades, shouting the name of her sisters. Prim hears Katniss and turns to see her running towards her. As Katniss approaches the barricade, a second wave of bombs deflates, sending Katniss hurtling through the air and killing many more children, including Prima. The last word from Prim in the novel before her death was Katniss. Katniss has been transferred to President Snow's mansion, now that the Rebels have finally taken control of the Capitol, but Katniss is badly burned and diagnosed with depression, vrye. Katniss does not speak and wanders around the mansion alone, eating very little and consuming a large amount of morphing. While on the drug, the deceased is inspired by Katniss, including her sister. Her mother takes care of her, but neither of them speaks, and both are exhausted emotionally and psychologically, especially Katniss. President Snow is being tried for crimes against humanity and various war crimes, and he was found guilty. One day, Katniss ventures into the rose garden surprised to learn that this is where the snow is being stored. She chooses a rose for Snow to put on his execution. They sit down to talk, though Katniss says a few words. He apologizes for her sister's death, but he tells Katniss that the final attack that killed Primrose Everdeen was ordered by President Coin, not the Capitol. Katniss realizes that if this is true, the explosion could have been the result of a plan originally developed by her friend Gail; however, Gayle almost denied any involvement. Katniss doesn't know what to believe or who to trust. The President of the Coin meets with all the remaining winners: Katniss, Pete, Highmich, Beaty, Annie, Joanna and Enobarria. Coin decides that they must hold a vote to see if they should host the 76th Hunger Games, consisting of children from those who had great power in the Capitol. Pete votes no saying it would be wrong to do so. Beetee votes no, saying that the rebels fought to end the Hunger Games, do not allow more. Annie votes no, and says Finnick will say no, too. vote yes. Katniss votes yes, saying it will be for Prima. Heimich agrees with her. Katniss gives the Coin a rose to give to Snow. On the day of Snow's execution, everyone in the mansion is getting ready. Katniss surprised her old prep team, including Effie Trinket, who dressed her in her Mockingjay outfit, telling her that all the other stylists had been killed after Kell's quarter. Katniss makes a note to himself to give Effie and the team political immunity from being accused of any crime. Everyone goes to the execution, and thousands of people stand and watch. Katniss sees Snow in a rose tied to a pole. Coin announces the execution and crimes that led to Snow's execution. Katniss loads his arrow. Katniss recalls a conversation with Snow in which they promised not to lie to each other. She understands that Snow was telling the truth that Coin ordered the children to be killed, knowing that by sending Prima into battle, she would be killed by explosions, making Katniss unstable and Monet the next suitable presidential candidate. When she's supposed to execute Snow, she kills the coin. There is a riot, and Snow begins to laugh, choking on blood. He was found mysteriously dead, possibly choking on his own blood or trampled by a mob. Katniss is acquitted because of her apparent insanity along with Gail and Dill's testimony about their involvement in the snow mansion fires to justify Katniss's actions in the coin murder that helped restore her reputation as Panem's hero. She and Heimich return to their home in District 12. Her mother moves to District 4 as 12 has too many sad memories for her. Cressida and Pollux travel to the areas to help people affected by the war and make documentaries. Annie gives birth to a son Finnick. Pete returns a few months after the arrival of Katniss and Heimich, after he recovered immeasurably from brainwashing. Finally, Katniss realizes that falling in love with Pete was inevitable, as he has always been a promise of a better future, not the destruction she now associates with Gail. She says she didn't need to fire Gail because she was herself, and she needed Pete, who symbolized hope of survival. Together with Highmich, they create a book filled with stories of previous tributes and their war dead, so that they are not forgotten. In the end, Katniss and Pete play the last real Game or not real. Pita asks Katniss: Do you love me? Real or not real? Katniss replies without hesitation: Real Madrid. In the epilogue, Katniss speaks like an adult, more than fifteen years later. She and Pete are growing up together again, though it's not specified if they are married. They have two children, a boy and a girl. The Hunger Games are over, but she fears that on the day when the innocent world of her children will be destroyed by learning the details of their parents' participation in both the Games and the war. When she feels Katniss takes to remind herself of every good thing that she's ever seen someone do: It's like a game. Repetitive, even a little tiring after more than twenty years. But there are much worse games to play. Characters For the full list see Category:Mockingjay Characters. Katniss Everdeen - Symbolizes Mockingjay for the Rebels. Katniss gives hope and suffering. She made her way to the Capitol and ended the Uprising. She killed President Coina, and then went to live in District 12. It became a symbol of the uprising against the Capitol. She returned to District 12 after the war and she and Pete grow up together again. It's unclear if she's married to Pete, but it turns out that she loves him in the final game Real or not real, which is also how Part III of the final book ends. In the Epilogue reveals that Katniss and Pita have two children, a boy and a girl. Pete Mellark - Was in the arena with Katniss, but was captured by the Capitol. He's loved Catniss since they were little kids. He was kidnapped by the Capitol after the 75th Games, and they hijacked him to make him hate Katniss. Pete was rescued by soldiers from District 13, including Gail Hawthorne, as a way to stop him from using propaganda as a weapon. Upon arrival at Area 13, Katniss, freed from the rescue shots, rushes towards him. Because of his psychological conditioning from the hijacking of the Capitol, he tries to kill Katniss. Eventually he heals himself and after the war he returns to the county 12 months after Katniss. Eventually they get married and grow up together again, and they have two unnamed children, a boy and a girl. Primrose Everdeen is Katniss' younger sister. It helps Katniss be safe when Pete's not there. Prim was working as a healer in District 13, and was killed when soldiers bombarded coin when a hovercraft with a parachute bomb fell on a herd of Capitol children. Prim was working as a doctor at the time of the explosion. Gail Hawthorne is Katniss' best friend and hunting partner. He is in love with Katniss, but eventually drove himself out of her life because she blames him for Prima's death. He ends up as a government official in District 2. The rest of his fate is unknown. Heimich Abernathy is a drunken former winner from District 12 who was once a mentor to the Hunger Games. He helped in the uprising and then returned to Area 12, where he remains drunk. Winner of the 50th Hunger Games. Effie Trinket is an escort for Pete and Katniss at the 74th and 75th Hunger Games. She is a resident of the Capitol, so she is distinguished by her strange clothes and distinct accent of the Capitol. She was arrested at the end of the 75th Hunger Games, but released when the rebels win the war against the Capitol. She witnesses Katniss kills President Coin and returns home to the Capitol after that. Plutarch Heaven - Was once the main gamer for the 75th Hunger Games, but secretly working with the Rebels to topple the Capitol. Finnick - Victor of the 65th Hunger Games. President Snow forced him to sell his body to wealthy People of the Capitol after two years of becoming a winner for his Hunger Games, threatening to kill people he loves if he didn't. Originally from District 4. Helped in the uprising against the Capitol. He and Katniss help each other keep their right mind when Pete and Annie aren't there. He marries Annie Cross after she was rescued from the Capitol, but killed by muted lizards with the smell of a rose during a mission to assassinate President Snow. She and Annie have a baby. Annie Cross - Victor of the 70s Hunger Games, she went crazy when she witnessed her neighborhood partner behead. She was arrested by the Capitol after Kell's neighborhood. She is a love interest of Finnick Odair, and then becomes his wife. She is widowed when Finnick is killed by a pod of Snow during a mission, and later gives birth to their child. Joanna Mason - Women's Tribute from District 7. She participated in the 71st Hunger Games, and again participated in the third quarter of Kell. President Coriolanus Snow is a brutal President of Panem who died either of suffocation or trampling. Katniss said no one cares, and it doesn't matter. It smells of roses and blood and poisons people to come to power. He also drinks poison when he poisons people so as not to look suspicious. It takes the antidote after, but that doesn't stop open sores from forming in his mouth that stick out the bloody smell that it uses pink perfume to hide. President Alma Moneta is president of District 13. She sanctioned the last bombing of the Capitol children, which killed Prim. Katniss kills her for revenge during Snow's execution. Boggs is a bodyguard and captain of the Katniss Army. He died in battle, but not before handing over comms and Holo Katniss so that she could continue her mission of killing President Snow. His last piece of advice was to kill Pete, not trust anyone, and do what she came to the Capitol to kill Snow. Commander Paylor is a rebel leader in District 8 and later became President of Panem after Katniss killed Alma Monet during Snow's execution. When she's supposed to execute Snow, she kills the coin. There is a riot, and Snow begins to laugh, choking on blood. He was found mysteriously dead, possibly choking on his own blood or trampled by a mob. Katniss is acquitted because of her apparent insanity along with Gail and Dill's testimony about their involvement in the snow mansion fires to justify Katniss's actions in the coin murder that helped restore her reputation as Panem's hero. She and Heimich return to their home in District 12. Her mother moves to District 4 as 12 has too many sad memories for her. Cressida and Pollux travel to the areas to help people affected by the war and make documentaries. Annie gives birth to a son Finnick. Pete returns a few months after the arrival of Katniss and Heimich, after he recovered immeasurably from brainwashing. Finally, Katniss realizes that falling in love with Pete was inevitable, as he has always been a promise of a better future, not the destruction she now associates with Gail. She says she didn't need to fire Gail because she was herself, and she needed Pete, who symbolized hope of survival. Together with Highmich, they create a book filled with stories of previous tributes and their war dead, so that they are not forgotten. In the end, Katniss and Pete play the last real Game or not real. Pita asks Katniss: Do you love me? Real or not real? Katniss replies without hesitation: Real Madrid. In the epilogue, Katniss speaks like an adult, more than fifteen years later. She and Pete are growing up together again, though it's not specified if they are married. They have two children, a boy and a girl. The Hunger Games are over, but she fears that on the day when the innocent world of her children will be destroyed by learning the details of their parents' participation in both the Games and the war. When she feels Katniss takes to remind herself of every good thing that she's ever seen someone do: It's like a game. Repetitive, even a little tiring after more than twenty years. But there are much worse games to play. Characters For the full list see Category:Mockingjay Characters. Katniss Everdeen - Symbolizes Mockingjay for the Rebels. Katniss gives hope and suffering. She made her way to the Capitol and ended the Uprising. She killed President Coina, and then went to live in District 12. It became a symbol of the uprising against the Capitol. She returned to District 12 after the war and she and Pete grow up together again. It's unclear if she's married to Pete, but it turns out that she loves him in the final game Real or not real, which is also how Part III of the final book ends. In the Epilogue reveals that Katniss and Pita have two children, a boy and a girl. Pete Mellark - Was in the arena with Katniss, but was captured by the Capitol. He's loved Catniss since they were little kids. He was kidnapped by the Capitol after the 75th Games, and they hijacked him to make him hate Katniss. Pete was rescued by soldiers from District 13, including Gail Hawthorne, as a way to stop him from using propaganda as a weapon. Upon arrival at Area 13, Katniss, freed from the rescue shots, rushes towards him. Because of his psychological conditioning from the hijacking of the Capitol, he tries to kill Katniss. Eventually he heals himself and after the war he returns to the county 12 months after Katniss. Eventually they get married and grow up together again, and they have two unnamed children, a boy and a girl. Primrose Everdeen is Katniss' younger sister. It helps Katniss be safe when Pete's not there. Prim was working as a healer in District 13, and was killed when soldiers bombarded coin when a hovercraft with a parachute bomb fell on a herd of Capitol children. Prim was working as a doctor at the time of the explosion. Gail Hawthorne is Katniss' best friend and hunting partner. He is in love with Katniss, but eventually drove himself out of her life because she blames him for Prima's death. He ends up as a government official in District 2. The rest of his fate is unknown. Heimich Abernathy is a drunken former winner from District 12 who was once a mentor to the Hunger Games. He helped in the uprising and then returned to Area 12, where he remains drunk. Winner of the 50th Hunger Games. Effie Trinket is an escort for Pete and Katniss at the 74th and 75th Hunger Games. She is a resident of the Capitol, so she is distinguished by her strange clothes and distinct accent of the Capitol. She was arrested at the end of the 75th Hunger Games, but released when the rebels win the war against the Capitol. She witnesses Katniss kills President Coin and returns home to the Capitol after that. Plutarch Heaven - Was once the main gamer for the 75th Hunger Games, but secretly working with the Rebels to topple the Capitol. Finnick - Victor of the 65th Hunger Games. President Snow forced him to sell his body to wealthy People of the Capitol after two years of becoming a winner for his Hunger Games, threatening to kill people he loves if he didn't. Originally from District 4. Helped in the uprising against the Capitol. He and Katniss help each other keep their right mind when Pete and Annie aren't there. He marries Annie Cross after she was rescued from the Capitol, but killed by muted lizards with the smell of a rose during a mission to assassinate President Snow. She and Annie have a baby. Annie Cross - Victor of the 70s Hunger Games, she went crazy when she witnessed her neighborhood partner behead. She was arrested by the Capitol after Kell's neighborhood. She is a love interest of Finnick Odair, and then becomes his wife. She is widowed when Finnick is killed by a pod of Snow during a mission, and later gives birth to their child. Joanna Mason - Women's Tribute from District 7. She participated in the 71st Hunger Games, and again participated in the third quarter of Kell. President Coriolanus Snow is a brutal President of Panem who died either of suffocation or trampling. Katniss said no one cares, and it doesn't matter. It smells of roses and blood and poisons people to come to power. He also drinks poison when he poisons people so as not to look suspicious. It takes the antidote after, but that doesn't stop open sores from forming in his mouth that stick out the bloody smell that it uses pink perfume to hide. President Alma Moneta is president of District 13. She sanctioned the last bombing of the Capitol children, which killed Prim. Katniss kills her for revenge during Snow's execution. Boggs is a bodyguard and captain of the Katniss Army. He died in battle, but not before handing over comms and Holo Katniss so that she could continue her mission of killing President Snow. His last piece of advice was to kill Pete, not trust anyone, and do what she came to the Capitol to kill Snow. Commander Paylor is a rebel leader in District 8 and later became President of Panem after Katniss killed Alma Monet during Snow's execution.
